DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claim 11 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over the combination of US Patent 5,320,534 to Thomas and US Patent 6,356,664 to Dunn et al.

In reference to claim 11, Thomas teaches a multi-channel image display device that includes two low-resolution image channels for the background scene (figure 1, projectors 32 and 34) and a high-resolution foreground scene (figure 1, item 18) where the foreground image maybe superimposed at any location of the background (column 2, lines 39-47). The difference between Thomas' invention and the claimed invention lies in the how the two image qualities are defined and implemented. Thomas offers the possibility of using different frame rates for background and foreground images in an attempt to reduce the "image generation costs and optimize the display to human visual system requirements" (column 5, lines 37-40). This idea of different foreground and background frame rates is elaborated by Dunn disclosure (column 7, lines 25-32).

In reference to claim 12, Dunn describes that the different frame rates are proportionally divided to insure synchronization of the different frame rate levels (column 6, lines 59-67).

In reference to claim 13-16, Dunn invention teaches that figures with higher importance are shown with at a higher frame rate. As described in column 8, lines 32-

67, target objects of high importance are assigned higher importance ratings, equaling a higher frame rate. As made apparent in the description and figure 9 there can be multiple objects with high importance ratings.

In reference to claim 17, Thomas teaches that the display apparatus include a head tracker (column 4, lines 17-23).

In reference to claim 18, Thomas' invention is used for flight, air traffic control and driving simulation (column 2, lines 49-51).

Conclusion

3. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
